The Syllabus regulates the Course

The course's goals, content, and literature list are regulated by a syllabus which is approved by the Board of the Faculty of Humanities. The relevant syllabus can be found on the department's homepage. Forms of examination and attendance criteria are also regulated by the syllabus. These cannot be changed during the term. After each term, the course is reviewed, and your viewpoints on course content and structure are taken into account. You are always welcome to make comments about the course during the term, or in the course evaluation, which is distributed at the end of the course.

Pre-Conditions

In order to pass the course, you need computer access to the university platform ATHENA and have basic word-processing and internet skills. We assume that you have activated your university account. See <https://aktivera.su.se> for information on how to activate your university account.

Plagiarism and Cheating

The Department of Slavic and Baltic Languages, Finnish, German and Dutch, does not accept any form of plagiarism and cheating. You as student are responsible for carrying out your studies and exams in a correct manner. This means, among other things, that in all written work, you must designate sources and references and take care to see that all direct quotations are correctly presented. The use of other person's work and formulations, without designating the source, means that you are guilty of plagiarism. Plagiarism can be a type of cheating and can lead to your failing class and/or suspension from studies.

Class Attendance

Participation in the on-line seminars—a part of the examination process—is obligatory.
